Related subject: Heslington & Badger Hill

I grew up on the Badger Hill estate and now live in Heslington Village so have a keen interest in this area. Badger Hill was originally built as part of Heslington Parish in the rural district of Derwentshire. Re-organisation, in '74 separated Badger Hill from Heslington and put Heslington in Selby, Badger Hill in York, as part of Hull Road Ward. Despite the creation of the unitary authority of York, this segregation has continued. Badger Hill and Heslington are historically linked, and as Badger Hill provides much accommodation for University staff and students, the link is there in many ways. Re linking this though wards, and calling the new ward, Heslington and University - makes sense - Badger Hill is part of the parochial parish of Heslington and the university (particularly after campus 2) is an important part of the area. A sensible move, and sensible naming.
