Comment text:

The fairest way to elect councillors for North Hertfordshire would be to have a system of proportional representation. Having wards with boundaries makes assumptions about how people are likely to vote and leads to safe seats which are hard to change. A system of proportional representation would lead to fair representation. A good example of the unfairness of the present system is the parliamentary safe seat of Hitchin and Harpenden, which seems to have been created merely to ensure the election of a tory MP - how about Hitchin and Stevenage or Harpenden and Luton. Proportional representation removes these unfair creations.
