the only thing that i have concerns about is as Stubbington grows will we need a 3rd councillor with possible developments at Newlands land south of Longfield avenue and the only other concern I have for democracy in Fareham as a whole is that the electoral commission needs to investigate whether or not term limits on how many consecutive terms of office a council leader can remain the current leader has been in post since 1999 to current date while his local electorate elects him as a councillor its fellow councillor's that elect the leader this is very unhealthy for democracy as the same person in charge has the same way of doing things and can get too complacent I would say that a maximum of 3 consecutive terms should be allowed before they stand aside as leader (they can remain a councillor) but they must stand aside as council leader letting someone else have a chance otherwise politics gets very stale and voters can feel ignored as the leader
