As a tenant/resident that has lived in braunstone town for over 30 years and has seen many changes, including the amalgamation of Thorpe Astley and Braunstone Town, I feel doing this and splitting both parishes would be devastating to both communities. I have never heard any resident from both Thorpe Astley or Braunstone Town say they are disgruntled with anything either parish is doing. In this time I haven't seen an approach from ANY councillor, from any political party other than Labour ask any questions or do any work to either parish. Both parishes stand together. Why fix what isn't broken? It's a ridiculous idea to break up something that is working nicely, is it to give conservatives more power to dominate the areas, so they can break this area up? Jealousy seems to be what this is, as all the other areas of Blaby don't have labour run councils. I feel really sorry for the residents and the councillors who have put all the hard work in at Braunstone Town council over the years.
