Without doubt, this very unwelcome change, would have a detrimental effect on both the identity, and representation of the residents, of Hallow. Broadheath is now swiftly becoming a very built up location, even more so with the proposed building of 2,000 more houses - and has the feel of an extension to Worcester. Hallow is still very much a village with its own charm and identity. At present, our District Councillor can and does engage with as many residents that need his assistance because of the number of residents that he represents. If, in the future, he/she had to also engage with those in Broadheath (even if there were two councillors to share the load) it would be impossible for them to do so in such an effective, efficient way, as at present. Please reconsider the ill-advised plan.
