The current set-up isn't broken. Why are you trying to fix it? By removing councillors dedicated to individual communities you are removing personal knowledge and awareness from local councils. If this is a cost-cutting exercise it will seriously backfire as communities will suffer and the infrastructure will collapse – local schools and associates will need direct representation, local licensing regulation will become absurd, waste collection and other Council-managed services will suddenly have areas they cannot manage. This will require further investigation and remedying, involving further planning. We need councillors dedicated to immediate regions – towns, villages, and hamlet conurbations. Please don't take our wonderful LOCAL councillors away.
