As a Great Comberton resident, I agree with the notion that it makes more sense, both due to social and historic ties, for our village to be grouped together with both Little Comberton and Elmley Castle. To me Fladbury seems far away (and very different 'riverland' landscape) to be presided over by the same councillor, I think it's better if we are grouped together with other villages that border the hill. I also believe it is unnecessary to extend the Elmley ward's boundary past the main road to encompass Aston Somerville and Childswickham. I think the boundary should stop at the main Evesham/Cheltenham road. In the same way that we have a 'South Bredon Hill' ward would it not make sense to have a "North Bredon Hill" ward? That way we can have a clear voice aimed at managing and looking after the villages around the north side of the hill
