Dear Sir,

Having considered the review carefully, I consider that 60 Councillors for a city the size of Wolverhampton are far too many when half that number would suffice. The savings, in this difficult time would be very welcome to council taxpayers who are getting a little tired of the annual increase in council tax which is becoming burdensome, to say the least with so many unemployed or furloughed workforce.

Perhaps at the same time, it would be a good moment to revisit the number of MP's from the current 650 to that of say 350 as this is a reasonable number and the 850 Peers need to be made redundant and pensioned off, which technically they are in fact, as an unelected chamber. I'm sure the house of lords could be turned into something more beneficial.

Perhaps you would consider my request in the fullness of time as the Treasury is under some financial strain at the present time which will impact on the taxpayer.
