To arbitrarily link Tatsfield to Limpsfield risks leaving our village without representation as Limpsfield is much larger and at future elections could easily vote for three Limpsfield-based candidates. Tatsfield shares nothing in common with Limpsfield - the latter place being an integral part of the Oxted conurbation. The M25 even severs the two areas. The precedent for a single councillor ward is already set by equally self-contained Woldingham. If the Boundary Commission is seeking to make rational changes then it would make more sense to combine Tatsfield in Surrey with Westerham in Kent. It appears that the Commission has only studied lines on a map rather than study the communities in which it is seeking to interfere. It would do well to abide by the saying - 'If it ain't broke don't fix it'.
